

REPAIR OR REPLACE YOUR AC?

Knowing the signs of a failing air conditioner vs when it just needs repairs can be difficult. If your AC is having problems, the team at Princeton Air can help you determine if it's more efficient and cost-effective to repair or replace it. Here are common AC problems to look out for to help you determine if your cooling system needs repair or a replacement.

IS YOUR AC MAKING STRANGE NOISES?

YES

Noises from your AC usually point to common issues like a broken belt or fan issue—but they can quickly turn into a more serious problem. Call the team at Princeton Air for AC repair services.

NO

ARE THERE BAD ODORS COMING FROM YOUR AC?

YES

Musty smells coming from your AC mean that moisture has found its way to your duct system. Call for repairs ASAP before it encourages mold growth and further impacts your indoor air quality.

ARE YOU GETTING LITTLE TO NO AIRFLOW FROM YOUR VENTS?

YES

Check for a dirty air filter—which should be changed every 30–60 days. Limited airflow can also be an early sign of a failing compressor so call Princeton Air for an inspection to determine the issue.

IS YOUR AC MORE THAN 10 YEARS OLD?

YES

An air conditioner can last between 15 and 20 years—however, if it's over 10 and is in constant need of repairs, it may be more cost effective to replace it.

ARE YOUR COOLING COSTS SIGNIFICANTLY HIGHER THAN NORMAL?

YES

High energy bills are a good sign that your system is on its way out. Call Princeton Air to help you determine exactly what's increasing your cooling bills and find the right solution for your home.

IS THE COST OF REPAIRS MORE THAN 50% OF THE COST OF AN AC REPLACEMENT?

YES

As your AC ages, it becomes more prone to extensive and costly repairs. If the cost of half of the cost of a new cooling system, replacement might be the best solution.

HAS IT BEEN MORE THAN A YEAR SINCE YOUR LAST AC TUNE-UP?

YES

Regular maintenance is the key to making your AC last as long as possible. At Princeton Air, we make maintenance easy with our Club Memberships—get annual tune-ups, discounts, and more!

NO

Call our team of experts to inspect your air conditioner, find the problem, and advise you on the best AC solution for your home.
